ZULULANDERS ABROAD

Ice, ice England

Ronelle Ramsamy

AS temperatures average between three and eight degrees Celsius daily, former Empangeni couple, Philippe and Cindy Le Juge De Segrais find themselves now living in a virtual winter wonderland. Despite the extreme contrast to the blistering Zululand weather conditions, the couple has comfortably settled in a town called Rayne's Park just outside of Wimbledon. Both Philippe and Cindy currently work in the maintenance industry sector at the same company - Integral UK Ltd. 'Living on Hibiscus Road in Empangeni was always a blast with a small community and having a lot of friends around each corner.' 'I had always dreamt of travelling and seeing the world. 'One day, Cindy and I decided to go to England and see what life was like and try and make enough money to settle back home. But as time went by, we preferred life in London as things are more accessible and there is so much to do,' said Philippe. Working as a mobile electrician, he is constantly travelling throughout greater London. 'I have seen so many historic buildings and observed the old way of life which differs from place to place.

'I have also experienced all the bright lights and attractions in the centre of London. We now call London our home and things have turned out better than I could have ever hoped for,' added Philippe.

Winter wonderland

As temperatures drastically plummeted in London recently, the couple often chooses to make the most of an ice escapade. 'To my surprise, I opened the front door and found a winter wonderland with all the roads, buildings and cars covered in snow. Before I had a chance to move, Cindy decided a snowball fight was the way forward which resulted in her retreating from the numerous snowballs flung at her. 'In our back garden, we attempted to build a snowman and snow angels. I only wished my brothers - Dylan and Jason Deyzel could have joined us for the experience.'

Before Philippe left Empangeni, he worked for Cool Awnings, Lighty's Sports Bar and did several electrical jobs for ANJO Construction. 'I thank my parents (Marianne and Anton Deyzel) and (Francois and Ursula Le Juge De Segrais) for their love and support through the years and my dear grandmother Nancy Swales for all her letters, keeping us well informed of any new events and news in Empangeni.' But for Philippe - he is and always will be proudly Zululand! 'The thing I miss about Empangeni is the small community with friends living close by, riding our motorcycles, getting together for braais and enjoying the warm weather and the beach. 'The weather here in London is always cold, wet and grey most of the time except for the long daylight hours of summer where the sun rises between 4-5am and sets between 10-11pm. 'It gets quite hot for a short period during the summer. 'Although I live in London, in my heart, Empangeni will always be my home.'
